What Will You Do With Jesus?

Joe Slater

"What will you do with Jesus? The question comes to you! And you must give an answer, for something you must do." So begins James Robinson's well-known hymn from nearly a hundred years ago. The song is right! There are places aplenty to be neutral, but this isn't one of them. No one can encounter Jesus without responding in some way. In Matthew chapters 26 and 27 we find at least seven ways in which people responded to Jesus in the last hours of His life. Here is one:

Judas Iscariot, what will you do with Jesus? Judas answers, "I'll betray Him!" For thirty pieces of silver, the price of a slave (Exod. 21:32), Judas sold the sinless Son of God into the clutches of His most fanatical foes (Matthew 26:14-16; 47-49). He used a kiss, the customary greeting of friendship, to identify Jesus to the mob that came to arrest Him. No wonder the name Judas carries such a negative connotation! A Judas goat leads the other goats or sheep into the slaughter house, then returns for another group. And one who turns his back on a friend is labeled a "Judas."

No one today literally turns Jesus over to His enemies to be crucified; but that doesn't mean we can't betray Him. Regarding once faithful but now fallen Christians the Hebrews writer said, "they crucify again for themselves the Son of God, and put Him to an open shame" (6:6). By their actions, they shame Jesus as a fake, an imposter, a fraud, just as His enemies claimed when they had Him crucified. We loathe Judas for selling Jesus for thirty pieces of silver, but is our price even less? Will we sell Him for the thrill of physical pleasure? For the approval of worldly friends? Indeed, what will you do with Jesus?
